

OPERATION FOR FIRST LADY TO BE DECIDED TODAY

President's Wife Improves Slightly—Prominent Physicians and Surgeons To Decide Whether Operation Is Necessary Today.

Washington, Sept. 11. — A decision on which may depend the life of Mrs. Warren G. Harding, wife of the president, was to be made early today by the corps of six attending physicians, headed by Dr. Charles Mayo, noted surgeon, of Rochester, Minnesota.

They were to decide whether a surgical operation was necessary. Improvement during yesterday in Mrs. Harding's condition—an improvement so slight as to be almost imperceptible—caused the doctors, after hours of earnest consultation and conference, to defer their decision on the operation.

When they decided on this course, Mrs. Harding was asleep and her general condition was such as to create belief that a turn for the better had come that would carry her safely over the crisis.

That is what the doctors were hoping as they gathered this morning to renew their consultation. They realized an operation must be the last resort, because of Mrs. Harding's weakened physical condition.

Early morning reports from the sick room were that Mrs. Harding spent a quiet night, sleeping much of the time and suffering comparatively little pain.

John W. Weeks, secretary of war, among the earliest callers at the White House, left in an extremely cheerful frame of mind.

"Mrs. Harding had the best night last night since her illness became critical," said Weeks. "Her temperature is getting back toward normal. If her condition continues to improve as it did during the night, her doctors will hesitate to operate."

"Indications point to an operation," Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois, said after an early visit to the White House, "as Mrs. Harding's better physical condition would enable her to stand the shock more easily."

Physicians report her condition is "even more encouraging than last night," McCormick said.

Herbert and Hubert, twin brothers, 18 years old, are free on bond, while John Shoemaker is confined in the county jail, John Shoemaker claims that he shot his father in self-defense, while his brothers are charged with complicity in the murder. ELECTIONS IN EASTERN STATES DRAW ATTENTION

Political Battles in Maine and Massachusetts Today and Tomorrow Attract the Attention of the Nation.

New York, Sept. 11. — The states of Maine and Massachusetts have the attention of the nation today. In the former state is being held the first state election of 1922 and, according to the old adage, "As Maine goes, so goes the Union." In the latter a bitter primary campaign is ending and votes will be cast Tuesday. A bitter fight has been made against Senator Lodge, who is seeking renomination to the upper house, has aroused national interest almost equal to that taken in the voting in Maine.

Maine folks are casting their ballots for United States Senator; four representatives to Congress and a governor. Eight women seek seats in the Legislature and ten county offices. Senator Frederick Hale, Republican, is opposed by former Governor Oakley C. Curtis, Democrat. Governor Percival P. Baxter, Republican, has former Attorney General W. R. Pattangall, Democrat, as an opponent. The four present Republican Congressmen are up for reelection. Democratic leaders contend that in the women's vote lies a potential surprise for Republican organization heads, who predict a plurality of 40,000.

In Massachusetts, Senator Lodge has not stumped the State, but his opponent, Joseph Walker, has campaigned vigorously. On the Democratic side the seekers for the Senatorial nomination are: Colonel William A. Gaston, Professor Dallas Lore Sharp and Sherman L. Whipple.

RIGHTING THE WRONG IN THE NEWBERRY CASE.

Secretary Hughes is entitled to the thanks of all right-minded persons for the review of the case of Senator Newberry which he has sent to an inquiring private correspondent. His letter not only reveals a disposition to see that fair play is done to a man who had been wrongfully convicted under the judgment of an inferior court—a judgment which was subsequently reversed by the United States Supreme Court—but supplies a readily intelligible and convincing summary of the proceedings in the case.

Many people, as the result of this conviction, gained the impression that Senator Newberry had been concerned in an attempt to get into the United States Senate by bribery and corruption. Of course he was really not accused of any such thing. The charge was that in a campaign in the primaries for nomination as a candidate for the Senate he had knowledge that a snub had been contributed to the expenses of this campaign which was in excess of the statutory limit for such expenditures. There was no intimation that there had been any improper expenditures of the money. But the statute it appeared, had, as construed by the inferior court, the effect, if Mr. Newberry did not withdraw from the campaign on learning that the limit of contributions had been passed, to subject him to criminal prosecution. Inasmuch as no one could have imagined that a compulsion existed in the law to force a candidate out on the moment of a discovery that the mark of voluntary contributions had been passed, it is indeed no wonder that the Supreme Court found that the statute under which such a condition was made was unconstitutional and unanimously revised the judgment of the lower court, or that Chief Justice White should have used this very positive language in his opinion: "Under this view, the greater the public service and the higher the character of the candidate, giving rise to a correspondingly complete and self-sacrificing support by the electorate to his candidacy, the most inevitable would erminality and infamous punishment result both to the candidate and to the citizen who contributed."

Mr. Hughes' summary of this case will clear the air of a great deal of misapprehension on the subject. Under all the circumstances it would be hard for anyone to deny the truth and justice of what he says in these words:

The conviction of Senator Newberry was obtained under a statute held by the majority of the Supreme Court to be invalid; rested upon a ground which did not involve any finding by the jury of moral turpitude, and was affected only by misconstruction of the statute which exposed him to conviction, regardless of any moral offense upon his part and no matter how high-minded he might have been in his conduct in the campaign.—Boston Transcript.

APPALLING COST OF STRIKES.

Necessarily rough estimates of the losses which the strikes of the coal miners and railroad employees have already caused, directly, show appallingly large figures, which are likely to be greatly exceeded when the ultimate reckoning is made.

The number of striking miners is estimated at 690,000, and that of voluntarily idle railroad workers at 550,000. On that basis there is an average daily loss of $7,500,000 in wages, making a total, thus far of $200,000,000 or more.

Loss of the mine operators is estimated at something like $250,000,000 on the basis of $1 a ton for the bituminous coal that would have been mined in the time of the strike. Estimate of the loss of the anthracite mine operators is omitted, presumably because it is considered that intensive operation will to a degree make up for present stoppage of earnings.

And it is estimated that the railroads have already lost about $1,000,000 through diminished operation facilities and conditions that required extraordinary expenditures.

These estimates make a total loss of more than half a billion dollars, of which nearly half is suffered by the workers.

Most of that loss can never be made up. And then there are the innumerable indirect losses from compulsory reduction of activity in industries which require abundance of coal for continuous operation, and from decreased purchasing capacity of the million and a quarter workers who are without their regular wages.

It is obvious that there isn't anything that can possibly be gained by the strikers, which can compensate the strikers for the losses which they are sustaining, whose enormous total is steadily growing while these workers remain idle.—Albany Journal.

The Houston Post asserts that the winner of the Democratic Senatorial primary in Texas is a Wilson Democrat and will be found supporting the Wilson policies in the Senate. With that information before them, the people of Texas may decide to send someone else to the Senate. The voters of Missouri set the pace.

President Harding — "We must reassert the doctrine that in this republic the first obligation and the first allegiance of every citizen, high or low, is to his Government, and to hold that Government to be the just and unchallenged sponsor for public welfare and the liberty, security and rights of all its citizens."

If you mean to challenge the righteousness of free men to be protected in their lawful pursuits against interference and violence, I will be glad to join you in submitting that question to the decision of the American people.—President Harding.

BEACH HARGIS MAY BE SLEEPING IN FRANCE

Mother of Breckinridge Youth Who Slew His Own Father Thinks He May Have Died in the Service.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 8.—Beach Hargis who in 1908 shot to death his father, a Breckinridge county feud leader, is a fugitive in hiding somewhere—or else he sleeps in a soldier's grave in France.

His mother, Mrs. Ellen Hargis, of Jackson, Ky., mourns him as dead. She believes he gave his life in the World War while fighting with a Canadian regiment. And yet, mother-like, she hopes some day to see her son, because there is no official report that he was killed.

Hargis shot to death his father Judge Jim Hargis, in February, 1908, in their Breckinridge county store. He said his father was choking him.

A jury in the Estill County Court fixed his sentence at life imprisonment, and this sentence was affirmed by the Court of Appeals. One of the judges likened Hargis to "Ivan the Terrible."

June 6, 1916, Hargis was paroled from the Kentucky Reformatory. After that came rumors of wild scenes wherever Hargis went, and March 15, 1917, he received a suspended sentence in Middletown on a charge of assault. The magistrate who tried the case said "in my opinion the evidence was a frame-up, although Hargis pleaded guilty."

Hargis was traced to Detroit, from where, it is believed, he went to Canada to join the army.

Railroads Are Not Always At Fault When Trains Are Late

Under normal conditions there are many things that make trains late; unavoidable happenings because they cannot be foreseen and because they happen in combinations of circumstances over which nobody could have control. In nearly every instance, late trains are caused through no fault of the operating railroad, and as a matter of information a few of the main reasons for train delays are given below:

Waiting on Connections

Under mutual agreement and for the special benefit of through and trans-continental passengers, railroads hold many of their through-trains, either at the starting point or at intermediate connection stations for 30 minutes or longer. All such delays, combined, benefit the public but upset time tables and play havoc with running schedules.

Delays in Handling Mail

Government regulations require that transfer mail must always be taken if the wagon or truck is in the station before the train has actually started to pull out. It often happens that a train is ready to leave on schedule time when the transfer arrives, but must wait until the mail is handled. In the long run, these wasted minutes, unavoidable on the part of the railroad, aggregate a serious loss of time.

Equipment Troubles

In spite of the fact that every railroad engine and car are given careful inspection upon arrival in a roundhouse or terminal, and again upon departure, unavoidable mechanical difficulties will naturally arise. Most equipment troubles which cause delay are due to some slight imperfection or breakage in the engine. It is just as impossible to prevent these engine troubles as it is to foresee and forestall machinery breakdowns in the average manufacturing plant.

Weather Conditions

Snow, sleet, blizzards, fogs, floods, etc., causing blockades, landslides, washouts and congestions are responsible for many delays. These happenings on any part of the line, of course, affect the entire line by deranging schedules, which must be adjusted promptly even under great difficulties. Safety is always the first consideration.

The L. & N. Railroad, operating service from the frozen North to the semi-tropical South, inevitably encounters a great many difficulties developed by adverse weather conditions. No railroad is more watchful of its equipment or more efficient in overcoming these troubles than the L. & N., the management frequently being able to anticipate these conditions and to take effective trouble-prevention measures.

New York Letter

by Lucy Jeanné Price

New York.—A group of women who can earn one million dollars a year are worthy of consideration—even from the designers and makers of clothes. Such is the stand of the women gathering here for the Women's Activities Exposition to be held under the direction of the Business and Professional Women's League. So they are putting on a fashion show among other things, not to dictate fashions for other people, but to impress upon thoughtless minds the fact that business women are among our best dressed people, and that the makers and interpreters of fashions ought to give them some special thought to these same business women in the creation of their styles. "Flappers, debutante, dancing girl, and every other kind of a girl, is portrayed and designed for," says Mrs. Carolyn Radner Lewis, "but no attention has ever been given us—and we think we're important."

A monument in the heart of the theatrical district, erected to the memory of Lillian Russell, has been suggested to the people of the stage, by one group of them. It is believed that there will be decided response to the suggestion, and that New York's first statue to a woman may be placed in Times Square.

"Better Times," the new Hippodrome production starts with a fanfare and a flourish, and it carries through an exuberance of color, music, immensity, and dancing, which it seems as if ever the Hippodrome had not quite equalled heretofore. It is all that a Hippodrome show could be, and there isn't much that could be said beyond that tribute. One of the most beautiful things in it is "The Story of a Fan," a rago and lovely ballet, employing the presence of scores of pretty dancers and figurantes, with Miss Virginia Futrell and Miss Nannette Flack as its pieces de resistance.

to this country to exclaim about how advanced our women are! How remarkable it seems to the older civilizations to see us in so many kinds of work and taking such an important place in the scheme of affairs! But here comes Miss Ingeborg Hellen-Nielsen, across from Denmark and reverses the usual order of things. Miss Hellen-Nielsen has arrived with the sub-director of police in Copenhagen and a military judge, to demonstrate before the International Police Conference, a new system for identifying criminals. She is a finger-print expert, one of the greatest in the world, and in spite of her less than five feet, her blond hair, and her red lips, she is one of the forces most feared by international criminals.

There is some quality of a respect which Eugene O'Neill plays in "The Endless Chain," by James Forbes, which has just opened at the George M. Cohan Theater. Not that the drama is not quite worth standing on its own and Mr. Forbes' reputation, but the Walter flavor is so good in it that one cannot help mentioning it. Margaret Lawrence has the leading role, that of the ambitious bride of an insolvent New York bond salesman, whom she aspired to reform, financially, with various complications, reaching a well worked climax in the third act. It is a bright and yet serious comedy, well written and well played.

Life insurance selling is to become an art, rather than a business or even a profession, if New York university has its way. It is inaugurating a life insurance training course along with its courses on philosophy, law and the Romance languages. The day of the hypnotic advance and the sledge-hammer attack is to be no more. Furthermore, girls are to be among the students of this course, and are expected to be turned out in flocks to displace the more impatient salesmen.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington. — "In the contemplation of Republican achievements in recent years, we should not lose sight of the tremendous benefits to the West in particular and to the country in general that have come from the Reclamation Act which was approved by President Roosevelt in 1902," declares the Republican Publicity Association. "For twenty years the Reclamation Act has stood as a monument to far-sighted Republican statesmanship; its efficient administration is a testimonial to Republican methods of practical government, and the American farmers have again demonstrated their thrift and energy in their hearty cooperation with the government in reclaiming the arid lands of the West."

"Approximately $132,000,000 has been expended on the various projects, involving the successful solution of some of the greatest engineering problems in the world. Two of the dams that retain river flood waters are the highest in the world while five others are among the largest of the kind. A sixty-mile tunnel has been built, the longest in the world for conveying irrigation water, and a number of other tunnels from half a mile to four miles long have been constructed. Over 500 miles of smaller canals for distributing the water over the farm lands.

"The Reclamation Act provided that the cost of the projects should be reimbursed to the Government by the owners of the land in ten annual installments, and it is remarkable how faithfully the homesteaders have lived up to their obligations. Of course the amount of the charges could not be ascertained until the completion of a project, and it was not until 1915 that one division of the North Platte project was finished. Every year since then has seen the completion of a new work. Repayments began in 1916, and that year showed that 88.6 per cent. of the amount due was paid. In 1917, the percentage was 91.9 per cent.; 1918, 92.3 per cent.; 1919, 93.5 per cent.; 1920, 95.2 per cent.; 1921, 89.3 per cent.; and in 1922, 85.9 per cent. The pronounced slump in agricultural prices following the war accounts for the falling off in the payments of recent years, but the farmers are entitled to great credit for keeping up their installments to the high point indicated. Probably there is not another business in the country that can show payments in the last two years so near the amount that was due.

"In the last ten years crops to the value of $426,000,000 have been raised on the various reclamation projects. That is almost three times the amount invested by the Government. Incidental to that production there have been built up towns and cities that consume great quantities of the products of other sections of the country. Not only has the new development been of great local benefit, but its influence has extended to all parts of the United States.

"Even though the Reclamation Act is a product of Republican statesmanship, the supporters of the policy now number practically every conservative Democrat in or out of Congress; in fact, the lasting benefits of the law have been so abundantly demonstrated that the members of both parties vie with each other in paying it tribute.

Other Republican projects, now bitterly opposed through partisan motives, will prove their soundness if needed legislation permits them to function. The ship subsidy bill is a case in point. It contains many of the elements of the Reclamation Act, and represents an investment on the part of the government that will return as great a profit to the people as the money spent in reclaiming the West."

King-becoming graces are justice, verity, temperance, staidness, honesty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness, devotion, patience, courage, fortitude.

Saturday's Game.

The Cards defeated the Mammoth in their game Saturday 8 to 6 by batting Cotter from the mound and specializing in extra base hits. Harding with two three-baggers was the leading slugger, one of his drives hitting the Herald sign which entitles him to a suit of clothes.

A freak play was Winger's hit which cleared the fence, hitting a tree rebounding back in the park. Umpire Wells allowed it a single.

TRUCK GOES OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

One of the county road department's large trucks went over a steep embankment on the Germantown road Saturday afternoon and Harry Sweet and Steve Reese, county employees, were slightly injured. The large car was too near the edge of the embankment to permit another car to pass it, when it slipped over. It is more than fortunate that the car was not entirely demolished and the two occupants instantly killed.
